

Vyagghapajja (Dīghajāṇu) Sutta

The Path that Leads to Succeed this life, Next lives & Liberation

The main goal of Buddhism is to point out the path of happiness which is the main purpose of everyone. The Supreme Buddha always describes the peaceful path for wellbeing of this life and hereafter. According to audience, the Buddha explains his message in short or in long. No matter whether the Buddha speaks to lay people or monks, he always points out the path of liberation from suffering. Vyagghapajja [Dīghajāṇu] Sutta which comes in Anguttara Nikaya clearly points out the path of happiness in this life and hereafter.

On one occasion, when the Buddha was at kakkarapatta, Dighajanu (Vyagghapajja), a house holder came to visit the Buddha. After bowing down, Vyagghapajja, sitting on one side, said the Buddha; Tesaṃ no, bhante, bhagavā amhākaṃ tathā dhammaṃ desetu ye amhākaṃ assu dhammā diṭṭhadhammahitāya diṭṭhadhammasukhāya, samparāyahitāya samparāyasukhāyā”ti.

“We are lay people enjoying sensuality; living crowded with spouses and children; using Kasi fabrics and sandalwood; wearing garlands, scents, and creams; handling gold and silver. May the Blessed One teach the Dhamma for those like us, for our happiness and well-being in this life and in future lives.”

Here the Buddha kindly explains the facts to his how to succeed in this life and hereafter.

First, for this life;

“Cattārome, vyagghapajja, dhammā kulaputtassa diṭṭha-dhamma-hitāya saṃvattanti diṭṭha-dhamma-su-khāya. Katame cattāro? Uṭṭhānasampadā, ārakkhasampadā, kalyāṇamittatā, samaṇīvitā.

Four conditions, Vyagghapajja, conduce to a householder's wellbeing and happiness in this very life. They are;

1. The accomplishment of determined effort (utthāna-sampadā)
2. The accomplishment of watchfulness (ārakkha-sampadā)
3. Good friendship (kalyāṇamittatā)
4. Balanced livelihood (sama-jīvikatā).

1. The accomplishment of determined effort (utthāna-sampadā)

This first one explains the importance of earning wealth in righteous way with effort for the wellbeing of this life. There is the case where a lay person, by whatever occupation he makes his living—whether by farming or trading or cattle tending or archery or as a king’s man or by any other craft—is clever and untiring at it, endowed with discrimination in its techniques, enough to arrange and carry it out. This is called being consummate in initiative. Not only we can apply effort in earning money, but in education and other good works in our life.

2. The accomplishment of Watchfulness (āraṅkha-sampadā):

This means the protection of wealth which is earned hard and righteously. There is the case when a lay person has righteous wealth—righteously gained, coming from his initiative, his striving, his making an effort, gathered by the strength of his arm, earned by his sweat—he manages to protect it through vigilance [with the thought], ‘How shall neither kings nor thieves make off with this property of mine, nor fire burn it, nor water sweep it away, nor hateful heirs make off with it?’ This is called being consummate in vigilance or watchfulness.

3. Good friendship (kalyānamittatā):

This says the associating good friends who explain the Dhamma which is useful for this life and future life. There is the case where a lay person, in whatever town or village he may dwell, spends time with householders or householders’ sons, young or old, who are advanced in virtue. He talks with them, engages them in discussions. He emulates consummate conviction in those who are consummate in conviction, consummate virtue in those who are consummate in virtue, consummate generosity in those who are consummate in generosity, and consummate discernment in those who are consummate in discernment. This is called admirable friendship.

4. Balance livelihood (sama-jivikatā).

This shows the way how to spend wealth according to income in the correct way. There is the case where a lay person, knowing the income and expenditure of his wealth, maintains a livelihood accordingly, neither a spendthrift nor a penny-pincher, [thinking], ‘Thus will my income exceeds my expenses, and my expenses will not exceed my income.’ Just as when a weightier or his apprentice, when holding the scales, knows, ‘It has tipped down so much or has tipped up so much,’ in the same way, the lay person, knowing the income and expenditure of his wealth, maintains a livelihood in tune, neither a spendthrift nor a penny-pincher, [thinking], ‘Thus will my income exceeds my expenses, and my expenses will not exceed my income.’ If a lay person has a small income but maintains a grand livelihood, it will be rumored of him, ‘This clansman devours his wealth like a fruit-tree eater.’ If a lay person has a large income but maintains a miserable livelihood, it will be rumored of him, ‘This clansman will die of starvation.’ But when a lay person, knowing the income and expenditure of his wealth, maintains a livelihood in tune, neither a spendthrift nor a penny-pincher, [thinking], ‘Thus will my income exceeds my expenses, and my outflow will not exceed my income,’ this is called maintaining one’s livelihood in tune.

Secondly, for future life;

Cattārome, vyagghapajja, dhammā kulaputtassa sam-parā-ya-hitāya saṃvattanti sam-parā-ya-su-khāya. Katame cattāro? Saddhāsampadā, sīlasampadā, cāgasampadā, paññāsampadā.

Four conditions, Vyagghapajja, conduce to a householder's weal and happiness in his future life. They are;

1. The accomplishment of confidence (saddhā-sampadā)
2. The accomplishment of virtue or morality (sīla-sampadā)
3. The accomplishment of charity or generosity (cāga-sampadā)
4. The accomplishment of wisdom (paññā-sampadā)

When someone comes to this level, he should have a clear understanding about the Karmic law and the dependent origination which is the very important understanding that a person can gain in a Buddha's time. With the understanding of listening to what Buddha taught, someone who wishes to go forward for the wellbeing of future life and the sansaric journey can see the path he or she should practice. Here four conditions are kindly declared to follow by the blessed one. One's real success or happiness depends on how far he or she has achieved these qualities. These qualities are very useful for inner peace and liberation from suffering.

1. The confidence (saddhā-sampadā):

When someone hopes to go forward on the path of liberation at the very beginning, he should have some kind of confidence in the Buddha's message which is immediately effective and visible results. When someone practices what the Buddha taught, he or she can see the results. Then his or her confidence gradually increases in the Dhamma and the Sangha too. As the result of this practicing, the confidence in the triple gems highly increases.

2. Virtue or Morality (sīla-sampadā):

This quality indicates the discipline in speech and behavior. When someone is knowledgeable in the Karmic law and the dependent origination, he or she tries to control his or her speech and behavior as much as he or she can for their own wellbeing. Having good discipline helps to successful spiritual life with concentration and insight.

3. Charity or Generosity (cāga-sampadā):

When someone goes on the path of liberation, he or she practices loving kindness too. Then they are generous to offer something to others concerning their qualities and needs. Practicing three merits is one of the major characters in the heavenly path. The three meritorious deeds are generosity, virtue and meditation. Practicing generosity brings a great happiness.

4. Wisdom (paññā-sampadā):

Wisdom which mainly helps us to overcome suffering and attain liberation from defilements, is highly praised in Buddhism. The main cause of our happiness is the level of our wisdom. Our real success depends on how much we have achieved wisdom. Hence, wisdom has been compared to a gem (Paññā narānam ratanam). Wisdom brings purification (Paññāya varisujjhati පඤ්ඤාය පරිසුච්ඤති). There is no other bright light like wisdom (Natthi paññā samā ābhā). Wisdom is used in several terms in Pali language such as Sammā Ditti (සමමා දිට්ඨි), Paññā (පඤ්ඤා), Amoha (අමෝහ). Wisdom should be increased from the beginning till the end to the maximum level of the path of enlightenment. Therefore, Buddhism always guides us to gain wisdom through all kinds of advices that the supreme Buddha explained in his entire life.

We usually experience through our senses such as eyes, ears, nose, tongue, body and mind. When objects such as forms, sounds, smell, taste reach senses, we experience about the world. The nature of this experience is arising at the moment and instantly ceases at once. Whatever we experience through six senses, five aggregates arise at that moment. Also, they immediately cease. Five aggregates are forms (Rupa), feelings (Vedanā), perception (Saññā), mental formations (Sankhāra) and consciousness (Viññāna). These five things arise together and cease together. They cannot be divided. We learn them by intelligence. These five aggregates, six internal senses or external objects are not permanent. They arise with the conditions at the moment, and they cease immediately when conditions separate. However, because of our ignorance we think they are permanent. Wisdom is against of this delusion. The nature of all conditions is that; Not being occurred (in the past) comes to an occurrence. Being occurred (at the present) will not come to (the future) occurrence. (ahutvā sambhutam hutvā na bhavissati). It means if we experience something now, it was not happened in the past in the same way like now.

Also, present experience doesn't go to the future in the same way. If somebody can understand this reality, he is ready to give up extremes about the past and the future. Also, he tries to live in the present moment seeing arising and ceasing wisely with fully awareness. Understanding of this impermanence is one of the qualities that we can practice for the wellbeing of future life.

Understanding and reflecting on impermanence (Anicca) leads to realize other two characteristics too which are dissatisfaction (Dukkha) and selflessness (Anatta). Reflecting on these three things is the path to liberation according to what the Buddha said.

May the Triple Gem Bless you!
